

EBSCO – how to find newspapers, popular and academic magazines and journals, and more...

1. Go to RESEARCH DATABASES on Metro Tech’s homepage. Find EBSCO and select.

The screenshot shows the Metro Tech High School website. The header features the school logo and name, along with navigation links for Directory, Parent/Student View, and Contact. A main navigation bar includes Home, About Us, Academics, Activities, Services, Students, Parents, Community, Staff, and Calendar. The Academics section is expanded to show a Library menu with options like Library homepage, Library Online Resources, Library Services & Policies, eBooks & AudioBooks, English Dept homepage, Research Databases, Research- let's get started, Citations & Formatting Styles, How to Avoid Plagiarism, How to Evaluate Sources of Information, Art Pathfinders, Visual Arts Pathfinder, Student Resources & Test Prep, and Teacher Resources. The main content area is titled "Library Databases in PUHSD" and contains a paragraph explaining that databases are paid subscriptions for reliable academic research. It lists several databases: ABC-Clio, Career Cruising, AZ Republic, EBSCO, Encyclopedia Britannica, Encyclopedia Britannica in Spanish, and Gale (Cengage) Databases, with a sub-item for Biography in Context. To the right, a section titled "Reasons to use the library databases" lists four reasons: Why Use Online Library Databases, Google vs Online Databases, Information Literacy / Research skills vital to college success, and what college professors say freshmen don't do.
